CLCG Colloquium

Nobuaki Minematsu

Structural analysis of speech and its application to speaker-based phonetic clustering of World English pronunciations

"English is the only language available for global communication and is used by 1.5 billion speakers. It is also known to have a large diversity of pronunciation due to the influence of speakers' mother tongues, called accents. Our project aims at creating a global and speaker-basis map of English accents to be used in learning World Englishes (WE) as well as research studies of WE. [...]"

Friday 2 May, 15.00-16.15
room 1312.0012

university of groningen